Showtime offers a darkly comic look at the 1987 stock market crash

By Kenneth Andeel
TV Media

Numbered among the worst stock market crashes in history is the October 1987 event that came to be known by the catchy, not-at-all-scary nickname "Black Monday." On that day, a complicated web of market forces, including insufficient regulation, international conflict and group psychology, came to a head in a market decline that was — and remains — the largest single-day decline in the history of the Dow Jones Industrial Average.

Now, 30 odd years after that frightening day, Showtime has dramatized the events leading up to it in an 10-part '80s-licious series called (you guessed it) "Black Monday." The show is loaded with top-notch talent that includes Don Cheadle ("Avengers: Infinity War," 2018), Andrew Rannells ("Girls"), Regina Hall ("Insecure") and Casey Wilson ("Happy Endings"), and it premieres Sunday, Jan. 20, on Showtime.

The series is described as "the story of how a group of outsiders took on the blue-blood, old-boys club of Wall Street and ended up crashing the world's largest financial system." So while the intricate causes of the real-life 1987 crash are still vigorously debated by economics professors, it seems like the fictionalized version presents viewers with a much more specific set of causes — and causers.

The tone of "Black Monday" might surprise anyone expecting a somber treatment of a historical event that caused real, lasting economic pain, but the series' provenance explains its darkly comic take on the stock market disaster. "Black Monday" is executive produced by a team that includes Seth Rogen and his longtime creative partner Evan Goldberg, a duo responsible for such absurdist comedies as "Superbad" (2007), "Pineapple Express" (2008) and the ongoing comic book-to-television adaptation "Preacher." These guys like to seek out the black humor in tragic or dangerous situations, and "Black Monday" carries that same stamp.

Given the iconic time period of the Black Monday crash, the television translation is a veritable pageant of '80s worship (or an '80s cringefest, depending on your age, perspective and taste). The trailers for "Black Monday" are an absolute cavalcade of stereotypes and symbols.

We have the big suits, the big hair, lycra bodysuits, aerobics routines, cassette tapes, Walkmans, Lamborghinis, clouds of cocaine and indoor ashtrays — all staged in a richly realized vision of 1980s New York, before it was diligently scrubbed, sanitized and gentrified in order to play better to tourists in the 1990s. The trailer glories in its period piece trappings, and the show is absolutely worth checking out for the look and feel alone.

That said, there is a lot to be said for the other aspects of the series as well. As mentioned, the cast is, like, radical, man. Cheadle has been one of Hollywood's most consistently excellent performers for a long time now, turning in seemingly effortless, deep and nuanced performances no matter what kind of script he's handed.

His main support comes from Hall and Rannells, both of whom have capable, understated comedic chops and are clearly solid choices to thrive inside the show's preposterously comic outlook. Wilson is a recurring guest star, and she steals scene after scene with her hilarious, doe-eyed intensity. "Black Monday" also features a seriously impressive roster of supporting players and guest stars, including Paul Scheer ("The League"), Melissa Rauch ("The Big Bang Theory"), Bruce Dern ("The Hateful Eight," 2015), Ken Marino ("Party Down") and Horatio Sanz ("Saturday Night Live"), all of whom are capable of doing a lot with a little, and turning in memorable performances with characters who may not see a lot of screen time.

NEW ON HULU

"Stella's Last Weekend" (2018)

This independent film is a true family affair. It's the story of two brothers whose unshakeable bond begins to wobble when they discover they're in love with the same woman. It may not sound like a comedy, but it is sweetly hilarious. Not only is it about family ties, but it is written and directed by Polly Draper ("Thirtysomething"), who also appears in the film as the boys' mother. Those boys are played by her real-life sons, Nat ("Paper Towns," 2015) and Alex Wolff ("Hereditary," 2018), and their real-life father is a composer, who composed the theme music and score. You can watch this family comedy starting Friday, Jan. 25.

Last Chance:

Serendipity (2001): This romantic comedy is silly and whimsical and full of cheese — in other words, it's wonderful. John Cusack and Kate Beckinsale are charming as the flighty protagonists, and this romp through rom-com tropes will leave you smiling.

Giada De Laurentiis hosts Food Network's newest baking competition

By Andrew Warren
TV Media

It's an exciting new year, and that means a sweet new competition series has found a home on Food Network. "Winner Cake All" premiered just a few weeks ago, and while baking competitions may be a dime a baker's dozen these days, this one has a secret weapon: its host.

Food Network personality Giada De Laurentiis fills the role with her iconic warmth and charisma, overseeing the Monday night competition as four cake-making teams spend each episode crafting sweet and decadent treats that are feasts for the eyes just as much as they are for the taste buds.

Each episode begins with the bakers facing the Decoration Challenge, where a client in need of a beautiful cake for a special event tasks them with creating unique cake toppers that fit a theme. Once the judges have sent one of the teams home empty-handed, the remaining three face the Cake Challenge.

In this week's episode, airing Monday, Jan. 21, the bakers are asked to make decorations that honor their favorite fairy tales. Then, the remaining three teams get to meet the clients, the stars of "Broadway Christmas Party," who are looking for the perfect cake to help celebrate the third year of their hit live concert series with the cast and crew.

Princesses demand glitz and glitter, and the bakers need to make a treat that's fit for royalty. Like all clients, these ladies are discerning and looking for the best of the best, and only one team can create the perfect cake and earn the $10,000 prize. Of course, the cash is only half of the reward — getting their cakes served at events is its own special prize for any baker, and that kind of name recognition can be a boon for any professional.

So far this season, the bakers have made cakes for the Busby family from TLC's "OutDaughtered" and crafted sweet edible sculptures for ventriloquist Darci Lynne Farmer from "America's Got Talent." There's no telling what each week will have in store as four new baking teams enter the kitchen. Tune in to the latest episode of "Winner Cake All" on Monday, Jan. 21, on Food Network.

Q: Any idea what happened to Sabrina Lloyd from "Sports Night," "Sliders" and "Numb3rs"? She seems to have fallen off the planet!

A: She's not off the planet. If anything, she's on more of it.

In 2012, Sabrina Lloyd walked away from her acting career and into a life of wandering the globe with her husband, who works for the UN, and her growing family.

According to her Instagram account and her blog (MotheringAroundTheWorld.com), she's currently in Kenya, but she's taken the long road to get there. She and her husband left New York for Uganda, where they adopted their first child. They then moved to Rome, where they had a second child. From there they went back to Uganda, then to an island in the American Pacific Northwest and then on to Kenya, where they've settled for the moment (though, as she points out frequently on her blog, that can always change when the next challenge/adventure comes along).

Q: Do "Kitchen Nightmares" and "Supernanny" use the same voice-over guy?

A: Amazingly, considering how many different voice-over people are actually involved, and the similarities of the two shows, "Kitchen Nightmares" and "Supernanny" have never shared a narrator.

"Supernanny," a reality show about a somewhat acerbic British expert telling people how to do things, was narrated by Jeff Bartsch, who is actually better known as a film editor (he most recently worked full time on fellow unscripted hit "American Ninja Warrior").

"Kitchen Nightmares," a reality show about a somewhat acerbic British expert telling people how to do things (see what I did there?), was actually narrated by three different people: J.V. Martin did the first two seasons, Arthur Smith did the rest, and Gordon Kennedy did the U.K. version.

Martin also performs a lot of different roles around Hollywood, but most of his time is taken up with narrating, mostly history-themed documentary shows.
